

The over reaction of the FAA the TSA and the Department of Homeland Security is absolutely deplorable and over kill for us, the victims of the 9-11 attack.

While we, General Aviation will support and comply with these ridiculous restriction, we certainly advocate a more reasonable approach and more reasonable access to the Washington DC airports. There is ABSOLUTELY no good reason the current restriction should apply, let alone adding new ones.

GA is NOT a serious threat to the Capitol, any more than a car, truck or boat would be.

Even if these restrictions continue (and they are totally overkill) the penalties for violations are even more ridiculous. If a person violates the airspace and proves a non threat, then make the punishment appropriate with the risk, which was none.

For me, I have totally written off flying anywhere DC, it's not worth it for me and my business associates. You've already killed the GA operations there (as well as the whole aviation community, airlines and all, don't we know).

The Bush administration is acting totally irresponsibly, punishing the victims, not addressing the problem and wasting tax payer's dollars on non solutions.
